MATAU

The new age understanding of the design is that it represents strength, good luck, and safe travel across water. The fish-hook shape of the hei matau finds its origins in Māori legend, which holds that the North Island of New Zealand was once a huge fish that was caught by the great mariner Maui using only a woven line and a hook made from the jawbone of his grandmother. The fish hook denotes the importance of fishing to the Maori people of New Zealand, and their strong relationship to Tangaroa, the god of the sea.

WOOD ART - TE MATAU A MAUI

In ancient Māori folklore, the exploits of Maui (half God/half man) stand unrivalled. On one such adventure, Maui stowed away in the waka (canoe) when his four older brothers departed on a fishing expedition. When they were far from the land, Maui revealed himself and convinced his brothers to paddle further out to the deepest sea where the fish would be in abundance. With his enchanted fish hook, which he had fashioned from the jawbone of his great grandmother, with its paua (abalone) shell eyes to see in the depths of the sea and a tuft of dog hair to keep the hook warm in the freezing depths and to retain the scent of the bait (blood from his nose) Maui cast his fishing line. As soon as his hook descended to the ocean floor, it was devoured by a giant fish. The ocean foamed and boiled as Maui struggled with all his strength to the fish. Finally, the fish yielded and floated to the surface. Te Ika-a-Maui (The fish of Maui) more commonly known as the North Island of New Zealand had arisen in the South Pacific Ocean. Te Waka a Maui (The canoe of Maui) is known as the South Island and Stewart Island is Te Punga a Maui (Maui's anchor).

WOOD ART – MIRO POROWHITA (PIKORUA)

The twist comprises a seamless ring twisted to form two or more adjoining circles.

The ring itself is said to represent the circle of life which has no beginning or end, is endless and as such is regarded as the symbol of eternity.

The single twist represents the joining together of 2x individuals for eternity. Though they may move away from one another on their own journeys, they always come together again sharing their lives and bending to become one. It signifies how the bonds of friendship, loyalty and love between a couple will last forever.

The double and triple twists have a similar meaning but refer more to the joining of two people or cultures rather than individuals.

FRAMED CERAMIC FERN FROND TILE

The silver fern is becoming increasingly recognised overseas as the national symbol of New Zealand. It was originally adopted by the New Zealand Native Rugby Team which visited England in 1888 and has since formed part of the uniform (or badge) of successive representative sporting teams. From the early 1900s, the fern leaf has been used as a trademark for meat and dairy exports. On 18 May 1908 to mark the attainment of Dominion status, the Secretary of State for Colonies approved the New Zealand Government's proposal to substitute a wreath of fern leaves for the laurel wreath on the Governor's Ensign. This usage also continued until about 1935. The fern leaf has been used as a distinguishing badge for New Zealand military formations, particularly during the Second World War, and was also used to mark the graves of New Zealand servicemen in overseas countries. In the most recent revision (1963) of the New Zealand Coat of Arms, two fern leaves provide a base for the supporters to stand upon.

The Silver Fern says "New Zealand".

The Pohutukawa trees when in full blossom are featured on many promotional materials about New Zealand. "I have found when travelling overseas a lot of people "know" about our Pohutukawa trees."
- Sue

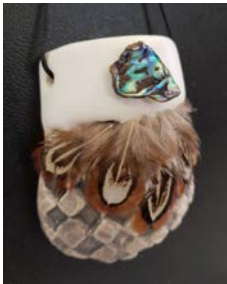

Pohutukawa grow prolifically along our island coastlines. They have bright red blossom, which appears near the end of December and lasts for several months. For that reason, it is known as the New Zealand Christmas Tree. The Māori believe that the pohutukawa blossom predicts whether the coming summer will be long and hot, or shorter and cooler.
